

S Mrs. J. Borden Harriman is business! The real control of the rea comes as a bit of surprise, for the handsome Mrs. Harriman had not taken many of her friends into her confidence. And the first inkling of her intention was conveyed by a neat little ad inconveyed by a neat little ad in-serted in the morning papers to the effect that "Story and Company beg to announce that Mrs. J. Borden Harriman will here-after be associated with them in a general real estate capacity."

Now, the society woman is no longer an anomoly in the business world of Washington-wit hess Mrs. Joseph Leiter's Francise Shop, the dressmaking business of Miss Maud Converse, daughter of the late Rear Admiral Converse, and a grist of other establishments—but so far few women of Mrs. Harriman's position have gone in for seling real estate. However, if she is as keen a business woman as she is a politician, I predict that she'll soon have the men looking to their laurels. Long a 'recognized power in Democratic party politics, Mrs. Harriman has recently made her house a rallying point for the leaders of her party and at the Thursday evening supper parties, which she gave during the summer months, one used to meet most of the "deserving Democrats" in Washington, as well as visiting party leaders.

She's a born organizer is Mrs. Harriman, and she ought to be an excellent business executive. The firm she has entered, which specializes in ornamental homes for more or less ornamental people, used to be Westcott and Story, Horace Westcott and John P. Story, jr. After Mrs. West-cott withdrew it was Story and Cobb, with Murray Cobb as the funior partner. But Murray Cobb went off to the war, contracted pneumonia somehow and his lungs went back on him—perhaps it was a touch of gas, I can't remember. At any rate, while he was desperately ill Mrs. Cobb was allowed, after many vicissitudes, to go out to him; and after the armistice he spent two or three years in Switzerland trying to get well. And some time during this period his connection with Story and Cobb was dis-solved. He seems to have succeeded measurably in his search for health, for he and Mrs. Cobb are now back in Washington and expect to spend the winter at Wardman Park.

BUT this, after all is another story. The Westcotts and the Storys and the Cobbs are all in the same rather rarified stratum of society which Mrs. Harriman adorns; ;and the firm has a very fashionable clientele. Mrs. Harriman maintains a house in Wash ington—a charming old house with a garden in that section of F street-the 2000 block, which is enjoying a renaissance of its old-time glory as a fashionable residistrict. However, spends a good deal of time in New York-or more properly New Jerfey-to be with her daughter, Mrs. Henry Potter Russell.

The Francise Shop, which Mrs. eiter financed and which is Leiter named for her younger sister, Mrs. John Ballantine Pitney, who was Miss Francise Williams, is under the active direction of two women-Mrs. Charles O'Donnell Lee and Mrs. Ormsby McCammon, who are both favorably known" in smart so ciety. Mrs. Charlie Hume is associated with them, too, and, as I understand it, the lovely negligees and other dainty garments in which Mme. de Sibour specializes are sold through this shop. Miss Converse has made a great Success as a maker of smart frocks and many a fashionable bride has she dressed for her wedding. - Miss Susanne Chase, daugh-ter of the late Capt. Volney O. Chase, U. S. N., and Miss Elizabeth Beach, daughter of the Morgan Beaches, have more recently set up a dressmaking establish-ment, and, although they are quite new at the game, they have ilmost more work than they can do and are turning out some delectable frocks.

Washington from Boston, after an absence of several years, to practice her profession here.

As for the tea rooms run by society women, their name is legion. Mrs. Belle Howell Bohna daughter of the late Admiral Howell, who invented the Howell torpedo and would have been a millionaire if the Russian govern-ment had not blown up—has the delectable "Yellow Dragon Tea House": and Mrs. Alice M. Bar-clay has the "White Peacock", which was launched by Mrs. Williams-Betty Semple Wiliams, who also built the Purple Iris and made a huge success of it. Asso-ciated with Mrs. Braclay is charming Kathleen Evans, whose special province is the South American Coffee Room, tucked away in the loft of the amusing little converted stable which is now the Tea House of the White Peacock. Miss Evans is a cousin, I believe, of Colonel and Mrs. Edward T. Brown and for a while she ran the tea room at The Caverns, near Newmarket, Va., the mammoth caves which the Brown family own and which they have been developing of late
